strongest possibilities. Mr. Evans has consistently declined to make a formal announcement of candidacy but is known to be receptive.

MYSTERY BURGLAR TURNS OUT TO BE ORDINARY PIGEON

There was a reminder of the mystery play, "The Bat," at the home of Jeanette Rosser, 1103 east Sixth South street, late last night.

Neighbors knowing that the Rosser's were away, were alarmed when they saw a light flash on in the house and then observed weird shadows.

Police were called and Patrolman R. H. Brewerton responded. His revolver clutched tightly in his good right hand, Brewerton entered the bedroom.

"It's the law. Stick 'em up, you're covered," he shouted.

The answer was a flutter of wings near a window. Investigation disclosed that a pigeon had entered via the chimney, had knocked over an electric candlestick, causing the light to turn on. No damage was reported.

Sun Dance Begins At Ute Camp

. . . . . Indians Keep Sacred Ceremony

OURAY, July 14.—The Sun dance at Whiterocks began Friday and will continue over to Monday. The dance is an observance of an Indian superstition and the participants must dance continuously without food or drink. The belief is that if the ceremony is continuously followed, it will bring new life and blessings from the Sun god.

It takes place around a tree trunk, or pole. In the center of a circular pavilion with booths or resting places for the exhausted braves. Atop the tree trunk, or pole, is a buffalo head or some similar emblem. The participants dance back and forth toward the center pole of the pavilion to the accompaniment of drums and the chanting of men and women of the tribe. A banqueting which often lasts two days closes the dance.

Benefit to Tribe

More than any other of the Ute ceremonies, this dance furnishes the tribe the opportunity for expression of emotion in rhythm, and is the occasion of more closely uniting the tribe. It gives opportunity for the making and renewing of common interests and policies; for the exhibition, by means of mourning feasts, of grief over the loss of members of the family; for the fulfillment of social obligations by means of feasts; and, finally, for the exercise and gratification of love on the part of the young in the various social affairs which always form an interesting feature of the ceremony.

In the ritual of the dance it is stated that once in a period of famine an individual wandered forth with a female companion in behalf of his tribe, encountered a deity, fasted, learned the ceremony, returned to the tribe, caused the ceremony to be performed, and thus brought relief from famine through the appearance of the buffalo. The ceremony accordingly may be regarded as one of rebirth or reanimation.

In this ceremony, the sacred tepee is often spoken of as the rabbit or lone tepee of the morning star. The camp circle symbolizes the constellation Corona Borealis—the camp circle of the gods above. It also symbolizes the horizon, standing for the universe. The lodge itself represents the earth as the home of man. The altar symbolizes the essence of life or spring of fertilization.

In the fork of the center pole, or tree, was the nest of the thunderbird. Into this nest a digging stick was usually thrust symbolic of that used by the woman who in the well-known tale climbed to the sky in pursuit of a porcupine and later birth to the Sun Boy. While the center pole itself, with its bands of red and black paint, is symbolic of earth and heaven, and typifies the supreme medicine or mystery; it may be regarded as symbolizing also, especially at the time of its capture, the common enemy. It is indeed asserted that from the fork of the center pole was formerly suspended alive an enemy captured in war. The dancers collectively overcome an enemy, generally the sun, and by their medicine compel the thunderbird to release rain.

Wreaths Have Meaning

The wreaths worn by the dancers are symbols of the sun, and the four men in the dance represent the gods of the four world-quarters, while the paints applied to the body, usually four in number, are progressive in their virtue, generally culminating in a black paint, which may be regarded as defying the rain to wash it off. The painted designs are symbols of the sun, the moon, the morning star, and the gods of the four world-quarters.

The whistling symbolizes the breath, or life, of man, and at the same time the cry of the thunderbird. Vomiting and sweating are employed as purification rites. The fasting and other denials are penance, done to obtain special favor of the gods, and represent the fast of the originator of the ceremony.

Water Supply Decreases; Wells Fail To Fill Hopes

PAROWAN, July 14.—City Water Supervisor M. L. Skougaard reports that Parowan's wells are not too satisfactory, despite the encouraging outlook. A flow of practically 400 gallons per minute is all that has been realized up to date.

Well experts advise the drilling of the big well 40 feet deeper, which would make it the same depth as the smaller one. It is hoped to do this soon so that the diminishing supply can be partially replaced.

Chickens Go Dry; Rain Aides Uintah

OURAY, July 14.—It showered again over the Uintah basin, Wednesday, quite heavy showers occurring about Fruitland and Duchesne, and also across Green river in the Willow creek and Agency Draw sections. Water was standing in pools about the country in each of these sections, and water ran down Willow creek in the Willow creek section as far as Mrs. Pumphry's place, south of Ouray. It failed, however, to rain at Ouray and in the middle Hill creek section. In the latter area water is directly needed. The taking out of water on the higher slopes for emergency crops, making it impossible even for farm yard poultry to get water to drink in this section, where water for house use is nil. While regular "Arizona" hot winds swept Ouray and vicinity Thursday, the tall thermometer at the C. A. Broome store at Ouray registering 103 at 3 p.m.

Green River Area Missed in Relief

OURAY, July 14.—To date the purchasing of cattle by the government, is a drouth relief measure, has not reached this section and the sections south of Green river. This is rather discouraging to some of the stockmen whose cattle are now so poor that they can hardly walk, some even having to be helped up when they lie down. The buying, however, about Roosevelt and La-Point and other places in the basin is proceeding, accompanied by the killing of the "un-salpable" cattle, a couple of truck loads of the best slaughtered animals being hauled to Roosevelt and turned over to the poor of the city.

HOME REPAIRS TO BE PUSHED

Deputy Supervisor Arrives to Aid Utah Office

Utah applications for home reconditioning loans will be pushed as rapidly as the necessary procedure will permit, assures J. O. Baar, deputy reconditioning supervisor for the sixth region with headquarters in San Francisco.

Mr. Baar arrived in Salt Lake today to assist local Home Owners' Loan Corporation officials to perfect organization of the new reconditioning division. The $200,000,000 appropriated by Congress is not apportioned by states so that the doctrine of "first come first served" must be applied, he points out.

Though the visitor hopes there will be plenty of funds to meet all eligible loan requests, he said he was highly pleased to find the Utah organization so well prepared to push all applications from this state to early culmination. This aggressive preparedness will be particularly valuable in case the funds are exhausted before the demands, it was indicated.
